Do you want to work in a team-oriented, multidisciplinary, dynamic and professional environment where colleagues help each other to ensure the best possible care pathway for the patient? Then you are the medical consultant or staff specialist we are looking for.

The medical speciality Emergency Medicine is now a reality, and we are therefore looking for innovative medical colleagues with an interest in the emergency field and with the desire to improve the professional standards in the Department in general and in our everyday work in particular.

 If you are a medical specialist who wants a change of course to become a specialist in emergency medicine, this is your chance. We can offer you a two-year course module in emergency medicine.

 Or maybe you already have experience from this field/course module and want to further develop your competences within the exciting world of emergency medicine? We would like to support you in this by offering you certification for emergency ultrasound, relevant courses and team training with external instructors.

Our expectations

The general functions of the on-call team in the Emergency Department:

-  Receiving and performing the primary acute assessment of the patient
-  Assessing whether the patient must/can be assigned a higher or lower priority
-  Starting relevant examinations and initial (stabilising) treatment
-  Ensuring that all necessary steps are taken to stabilise the acutely ill patient
-  Ensuring that all the necessary professional groups/specialist areas are present or called as needed (referral/working diagnosis)
-  Acting as emergency manager in case of an emergency situation arising or being reported

We expect that you have adequate professional enthusiasm and experience to independently handle the acute patient treatment and experience in supervising junior doctors and medical student.

You must be motivated, open, flexible and good at working in a multidisciplinary environment both in the department, but also with the rest of the emergency hospital.

We take good care of each other in the Emergency Department and work hard every day to ensure the best possible treatment of the acute patient. We know that we are best when interdisciplinarity rules. We therefore expect that you want to contribute to the professionalism and be part of a wider community.

Emergency department - description of the department

Emergency Department at Slagelse Hospital

Region Zealand's largest emergency department. 75,000 contacts annually. 28,000 patients are brought in via 112 and the rest are referred by their family doctor/GP for emergency admission. We have an average of 4.5 critical calls per day (patient is seen immediately) and trauma calls.

The department has approx. 250 employees and 53 emergency beds/reception cubicles in addition to responsibility for its own Emergency Department at two different addresses.

Examination and treatment take place in ultra modern and innovative surroundings from 2013, equipped with everything the physicians may need in the acute phase. Our ambition to become the absolute best emergency department will be realised now that the Emergency Department is expanded by the appointment of four new specialists as the hospital management has increased the staffing of the on-call function in order to meet the ambitious plan.

The Department is well organised, and tasks are carried out in teams.

Research in focus

We are deeply involved in national networking and cross-regional project participation. In this context, we are part of Region Zealand's development partnership with Beth Israel Emergency Department in Boston under the Harvard Medical Faculty.

The Department has its own research unit with increasing activity and good opportunities for obtaining support for the initiation of research projects.

The Department also has a clinical associate professor assigned to it, who is responsible for the clinical training of medical students from the University of Copenhagen.
